David Michael, chair of Gould & Ratner's Human Resources and Employment Practice, spoke at the International Housewares Association (IHA) annual Chief Housewares Executive SuperSession (CHESS) conference on Oct. 5 and 6.

CHESS is IHA's annual senior-level conference for industry leaders. This strategic education and networking event of the year allows attendees to access high-profile industry experts directly and share information and ideas with other housewares and home goods decision-makers.

David's panel, "The New Hybrid Workplace: How Your Company Can Avoid Hiccups and Earn Hurrahs," discussed the latest labor and employment issues arising from working at home and what may be the new "hybrid workplace," where employees split time between the office and working at home.
